Graph Decompositions and SONET Networks

Charles J. Colbourn
University of Vermont

An optimization problem in the assignment of wavelengths to communication circuits in an optical network is described. When traffic loads are balanced, the assignment problem reduces to a graph decomposition problem. In this talk, some special cases of this problem are examined using techniques from combinatorial design theory.