Population Dynamics With Applications to Mathematical Biology

Juan Carlos Pardo Millán

ABSTRACT

In this talk I will survey some recent developments on the topic of population dynamics. In particular, I will focus on the long term behaviour of branching processes in random environment. During my talk, I will explain how these results can be applied to a specific model of parasites growing on a cell division procedure.